

Improving Customer Satisfaction Scores Through Better Processes and Coaching

Prime Therapeutics is a pharmacy benefit management company dedicated to providing innovative, clinically-based, cost-effective pharmacy solutions for clients and members, covering approximately 14.7 million people.

The Challenge

Prime Therapeutics' contact centers were faced with customer satisfaction scores that, though adequate, left room for improvement. They didn't have a structured process in place that enabled agents to manage customer issues in a consistent way. And, they knew they needed to refine their coaching process to ensure that changes to the frontline were supported and sustainable.

“Our Member Satisfaction Surveys came back and we scored in the superior range for member satisfaction two years in a row! Clearly, we have made the call strategy part of our normal business. We owe much of the credit to your solutions and your team.”

– Bob Menhart, Vice President

The Solution

Prime Therapeutics, led by Bob Menhart, vice president of call center operations, turned to Ulysses Learning for contact center training and coaching solutions. Menhart realized that his contact centers needed a structured process to measure calls and further improve the customer experience. Ulysses' team began by developing a training program for Prime Therapeutics' agents. The team showed agents and their supervisors how to handle calls in ways that were more customer focused, and then let them practice these skills through simulation-based role playing.

Next, Ulysses Learning looked at the way the company was using coaching. They found that managers were coaching their agents in single, hour-long feedback sessions once a month. Research shows that when agents receive coaching on multiple behaviors in a single session long after they occurred, they don't know where to focus their attention and therefore don't make changes. Therefore, Ulysses' team showed the company how to maximize the effectiveness of coaching by making it just in time, focused and in smaller segments following a call observation.

To ensure that this culture change was a success from the top down, Menhart served as the executive sponsor. He participated in the coaching calibration sessions and made sure that the company's leadership team attended the training sessions. Plus, he listened to transcripts of great calls and personally congratulated individual agents, which greatly increased morale.

Results

- The company receives approximately 5 contacts a day from members complimenting an agent's performance which was unheard of prior to the Ulysses implementation
- The “Ability of Customer Service Representatives to Explain Things Clearly to You” rose by 56%
- The “Ability of Customer Service Representatives to Handle Your Question or Problem in One Call” increased by 51%
- The measure of “How Satisfied Are You With Agents' Courtesy and Friendliness” rose by 32%

Since 1995, Ulysses Learning has helped organizations of all sizes improve their customer service, sales and coaching performance. Using online, role playing simulations, Ulysses helps build decision making and advanced interaction skills in contact centers and at all points of customer interaction through the organization. We spent four years in research and development to create the validated content and proven methods to help companies effectively train their front line, engage their leaders and ultimately boost their customer base.

Our simulations deal directly with the different type of emotions and challenges that customer service agents face today.